

Gallatin Public Affairs

PERMITTING & ENVIRONMENTAL STRATEGIES

Our extensive northwest permitting and environmental experience, coupled with communications and public affairs expertise allows us to convey technical or policy related ideas to a wide range of decision-makers and stakeholders. Whether you need guidance through the permitting process, or to have your story told to a variety of audiences, we can help you garner public support, establish a foundation in the community, and address environmental stewardship in a positive and innovative manner.

Products & Services

Permitting

Gallatin offers a full suite of permitting services including stakeholder engagement, public comment, media relations and communications, research and messaging development, and full permit management.

Technical and Environmental Public Communication

From public testimony to individual stakeholder meetings, we can serve as the public face of your project, effectively translating the intricacies of science, environmental policy, technical aspects and regulations.

Scientific and Expert Collaboration

We can help your team of legal experts, environmental consultants, and project developers communicate and move forward in the permitting and development process efficiently and effectively.

Data Analysis and Translation

We can examine a wide variety of data and data types as well as environmental documents and translate this information for clients, stakeholders and the public.